Dear Sir/Ma'am,

Good day!

I would like to inquire and clarify regarding our ownership of the land we inherited from our grandfather. The lots already have approved survey plans from the DENR Regional Office and Tax Declaration duly named to us, as heirs. We, the heirs, are also the occupants of the land. However, aside from us, there are also other informal settlers that are also actual occupants of the land. These informal settlers don't have any proof of ownership.

Can we assert the "bona fide claim of acquisition of ownership" since we the heirs are the ones who have the approved survey plan and tax declaration over the lands involved? If yes, can we request for a certification from your office, to certify our ownership? I am willing to send various documents upon clarification on this matter.

I am hoping for your immediate response on this matter.
