Salutations!

It has come to my senses that my homeland, the Island of Mindoro, is facing a dangerous threat of the devastation of our marine ecosystem. It has come to my attention as part of "Kabataan of Oriental Mindoro," a youth-oriented movement with a common goal of sustaining a good relationship between humans, animals, and nature. And one of our advocacy is to prevent the reoccurrence and to reuse dynamite for fishing, for it will destroy the natural habitats of our marine ecosystem. And if it is not stopped, it will definitely devour our future slowly and painfully.

It's been a decade past that previous secretaries of DENR have consulted this issue of our marine ecosystem. The growth of competition for catching fish leads some of our fisher folks to use illegal ways such as dynamite and explosive fishing and the use of fined-hole nets. They have no respect for the marine wildlife and no respect for the residents who live in this area. Aside from throwing their dynamite mercilessly, they also leave their litter everywhere. Fishing line has been caught around my feet on several occasions, tin lids and cans left lying on the grass, and sandwich bags, cans, and bottles are strewn all over the place as well as the in the sea and the shoreline. Remains of dead fish and other marine life scatter on its shorelines. They camp out and fish all hours of the day and night using dynamite and small holes nets. Even if it is a protected area and no fishing is allowed, like all laws in this country, no one cares if these people break the law. Community officers walk past them and sometimes even sit watching them; the police have no interest whatsoever, and the Wildlife Trust is unwilling to do anything. People are fishing and taking the fish away. Will no one take responsibility for their actions?

For me fine is not enough; the government must take action. The late DENR Secretary, Gina Lopez, has already retackled these problems to them. But after her sudden death, illegal doers emerge again from their slumber. And as a concerned youth and citizen of Oriental Mindoro, I am requesting your good office to pay a visit to our island, specifically to Pola, Naujan, Roxas, Bulalacao, Mamburao, and Lubang. These mentioned places were reported to be conducting such illegal activities against the environment and marine life.

My suggestion is to hunt them down and detain them in a sanctuary where they will be taught and enlightened their mind to the effect of their illegal activities on the environment and, most of all, on the future. A heart-to-heart talk might work for them and make them realize the dangerous impact of this not only on their health and life but also on the world.

I am hoping for your immediate response to this dilemma of my fellow Mindoreños, I am hoping for your favorable response in this regard. I am hoping for your immediate response to this dilemma of my fellow Mindoreños, I am hoping for your favorable response in this regard.

Respectfully Yours,

LOUIS NIKO B. GOCO
